Considerable currency was given here to-day to a sensational report of the ordering of uniforms for the Irish Republican army and the formation of a company to come to London to escort the Dail delegation back to Ireland upon the conglusion of peace. The story, however, was ridiculed by Sinn Fein leaders, who say no uniforming of the army is going on and that there is no question of any detachment coming to London at any time.

Since the truce there has been no interference by the military with the Irish Republican army, uniformed or not, and its existence has been officially recognized for truce purposes, with the cooperation of liaison officers of the Irish Republican army and the British army.
